

Is it Possible to Live in a Building that you Designed?

When on the search for apartment rentals in NoMad, you may be wondering if it is possible to live in a building that you designed. Well, it is! There are a few ways in which you can have a hand in the design of apartment buildings, be it from an employment standpoint or purchasing an apartment where you get to make the design decisions. Either way, you do have some form of control, which makes living in an apartment that much more enjoyable.

Employment Positions

Eco-friendly apartments for rent in NYC can be found by looking for newer builds. If you have experience in the field of architecture, perhaps you can become involved with a project for the creation of new apartment buildings. Currently, COOKFOX is seeking a junior architect in New York with excellent design skills and 2 to 3 years of professional experience. If you fit the bill, this could be your “in” as far as designing an apartment in which you can live. This is just an example of how you can be involved in the design process of green apartments for rent in NYC.

Design before Move In

Some design firms allow individuals to come in and view apartments when they are not complete. These apartments may be for sale or rent and the individual who takes on the sale/rental will have input in the design process. This is more likely when purchasing an apartment, but is still a great way in which to put your creative touch on the home where you will live. When searching for apartments, use sites like Eosnomad.com to search for apartments where you might have a little design control. This makes the process more fun, plus you get exactly what you want in your new home!